

General questions

1. What problems can you identify in this story? Are solutions presented?
2. In what way might this story be relevant in your community?

Further exploration

1. If rates of unemployment and poverty weren't so high, do you think there would still be tension around immigration?
2. South Africa has one of the strongest economies on the African continent. Does the country have a responsibility to allow immigrants to aid their home economies through remittances?
3. Should economic migrants and migrants seeking asylum for safety reasons be given different priorities in legal immigration systems? Why or why not?
4. What are some of the similarities between South Africa and the United States in the way immigration is debated today?