

Suggested writing prompt (250 words)

South Sudan has myriad internal problems from a history of civil conflicts to embedded corruption. Yet many of the issues compounding the crisis there today are connected to the West and industrialized nations such as climate change and the war in Ukraine. Are the countries that bear responsibility for those issues morally compelled to intervene in places like South Sudan? If so, how should they best deal with a governance system rife with corruption?