1. Youn says that “less than 2 percent of climate finance goes to farmers” and that “it’s like they don’t even exist as part of the climate dialogue.” Why do you think that is? Should more climate finance be allocated to small farmers? Why or why not?
2. Can you think of any other climate change impacted industries that could benefit from a program similar to One Acre Fund?
3. Why do you think the One Acre Fund model has been successful in reaching smallholder farmers and achieving results?
