

Discussion Questions

1. What challenges do students face studying from prison?
2. Why do you think the American Bar Association has historically not allowed incarcerated individuals to pursue a legal education?
3. What ethical questions arise when allowing incarcerated individuals to study law, particularly in cases involving serious crimes?
4. This program started in Minnesota thanks to buy-in from private funders and the state's corrections system. Do you think the program will be replicable beyond Minnesota? Why or why not?
5. Even if the scholars in this report obtain a law degree, they might never have the opportunity to practice as a lawyer. How else might their participation in the program be valuable?