

Suggested writing prompt (250 words)

One of the main criticisms of The Legal Revolution is that it allows incarcerated individuals to access a legal education at no cost while many traditional students have to pay tuition. Proponents of the program say it's in the public interest to include their perspectives in the legal system. Consider the different points of view. Then describe your reaction to the program?